DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

1. Applicant's election with traverse of Species A in the reply filed on 6/1/04 is acknowledged. The traversal is on the ground(s) that Species B and C include the structure defined in the invention of species A and there would be no undue burden on the Examiner if all the claims were examined together. This is not found persuasive because Species A, B and C disclose distinct structures, such as Species C do not discloses any insulating yarns, and Species B discloses insulating yarns that are structurally different from Species A. As a result, Species A are classified under class 219/542, Species B are classified under 219/528 and species C are classified under 338/51. As a result, claims 3,5,8 and 11 are withdrawn from the consideration.

The requirement is still deemed proper and is therefore made FINAL.

Specification

2. The disclosure is objected to because of the following informalities: insulating layers 3 are listed as 31 (Page 5, lines 9 and 15).

Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

3. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

4. Claims 1-2,4, 6-7 and 9 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Ford et al (2,967,415).

Ford discloses a woven electric heating element comprising an electric heating sheet formed by weaving a plurality of electric heating wires 1-6 and a plurality of insulating threads 7-12, and two heat-resisting layers 34 and 35 covering respectively two opposite surfaces of the electric heating sheet. Further, Ford discloses two conductive clamp plates 30 which are mounted respectively on two opposite ends of the heating sheet.

As for claims 6-7 and 9, Ford is inherently capable of making the woven electric heating element because he discloses all structural elements of the invention.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

5. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

6. Claim 10 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Ford in view of Horey et al (2003/0046550).

Ford discloses substantially the claimed invention, but is silent regarding steps of cutting the sheet into sections and connecting them in parallel. Horey discloses a process of making electric blankets 30 including steps of cutting them along lines 44.

Art Unit: 3742

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art to modify Ford's invention to include steps of cutting the heating sheet into separate sections as taught by Horey as an obvious common step of making the heating element, and connect them in parallel in order to achieve heating results wanted by user.
